The Baldwin Tragedy

Still Surmising and Advancing New Theories.

"Unknown" Billiardist, a Bad Man, Proves an Alibi.

The Baldwin murder mystery is to-day as much complicated as ever, and in fact it is more so, for all of the supposed claes ob-tained have fallen through, and nothing remains for the detectives to work upon.

In our late cities, last evening we mentioned the fact that the Chief of Police was endeavoring to locate the whereabouts of Lowther, the man with whom Polywin played billiards in Connersville last Saturday. A letter from Detective Carr, of Rushville, Ind., received last night, states that Lowther is in Rushville, and that he came there last Saturday night from Connersyille. This, it will be seen, lets Low-ther out of the murder altogether, as he cotablishes an alibi beyond a doubt, THE BENEET PARTY RELEASED.

The fact of the morning papers being able to first give the result of Prof. Wayne's analysis of the supposed blood spots is so remarkable that the Enquirer reporter gues out of his way to mention it. Such incidents are getting to be rare. Almost everything of interest occurs during the day, and is first read in the afternoon pa-pers. When by chance an occurrence proves otherwise, it is sufficiently unusual to be mentioned, and the Enquirer deserves the thanks of the afternoon press for helping direct public attention to the fact.
